
About CLG

The Continuous Learning Group, Inc. (CLG), cofounded in 1993 by Drs. Leslie Braksick and Julie Smith, has grown into the largest behaviorally based management consulting firm in the world. CLG's clients come from the Fortune 500—along with non-U.S. clients of similar size.

CLG offers a consulting partnership that has a lifelong impact on its clients, their people, and their organizations. CLG achieves this by applying the science of behavior to clients' most pressing business challenges and opportunities. Most clients employ one of CLG's three centerline offers, or some combination of them: Performance Catalyst[®], *Leadership Catalyst*SM, or *Change Catalyst*SM. CLG begins with the client's need and desired outcomes, and then applies world-class talent and tools to help the client navigate successfully through change, while unlocking and unleashing the organization's Discretionary PerformanceSM.

CLG's consultants work comfortably side-by-side with leaders at all levels, in the trenches, sweating the same details of getting results that the firm's clients do, taking time to build relationships that deliver results. CLG's work with CEOs and their Boards on issues of CEO succession, executive leadership development, and strategic talent management are heralded by clients who turn to CLG for help in those areas. Similarly, CLG coaches are often found at the BU President and site levels, working with high-potential leaders at all levels to maximize their leadership excellence in areas of greatest importance to the business.

CLG is an enterprise of uncommon people who perform uncommonly well. For a decade and a half, CLG has helped clients achieve remarkable—and measurable—results in ways that also develop sturdy, positive, high-performing cultures. CLG helps execute the behavioral portion of clients' most challenging strategies. CLG helps clients whenever leadership excellence, changing behavior, and emotional engagement are critical to achieving business results.
